My concern is at the extent/scope of the statement in that it does not specifically address 2 important areas:

1. Female genital cosmetic surgery which is escalating. The margins between female genital "cutting" which is prohibited, and other female genital plastic surgery, is quite blurred and I think practitioners should have clear guidelines as to what is acceptable.
2. Most infant male circumcision is surely cosmetic surgery (parents wanting it done for a certain "appearance" of the penis) and this should be dealt with in the section dealing with cosmetic surgery on minors
