

From: [REDACTED]
To: medboardconsultation
Subject: revising codes of practice...
Date: Tuesday, 14 August 2018 8:16:08 AM

Dear Sir/Madam,

I understood that the Dr's have a motto of "do no harm."

I believe it is up to each Dr to decide what is harm and what is not. They know their Patients, well one hopes they do.

I support doctors having the right to voice their beliefs as well, often these beliefs help them in their practice of doing no harm.

Many people, young and older are getting confused about their gender, there is nothing wrong with a dr who says it as it has been for thousands of years. Patients can just either go to that dr or not!!

Why should all doctors have to think the same thing? what choice does that give us?? the patient.

Surely it is up to patients to decide who they would like to go to.

Me? I go to the one most accepting of alternative med's. It is my body and I have the right to decide what I allow into it!!

Currently, I don't say much as the most accepting one is the one who doesn't know.

Recently I refused a [REDACTED] and I am happy with that result. What I was not happy with was the reaction of the Dr! I feel like suing him for BULLING me!!! but I won't I'll just change Dr's. And I won't tell him.

regards,
Grace Field.